

Old Sarum/Boscombe Down Collection

by Roger Jackaman

8 August, 2020

Thursday, 8th August saw a hardy group of our newly formed museum section make their rather damp way to the outskirts of Salisbury for our fourth visit of the season.

A combined group made up from Southern, Oxford and Western sections made their way, variously, to what turned out to be the most interesting museum so far. (Dawn reckons I always say that.)

Stuart Giles of Oxford section had put the day together for us, he has a contact, Graham, (an Airhead fan), in house. Whilst not a guided tour Graham gave us a most informative introductory talk. He took great care to point out that it is not a museum but a live collection.

As importantly a cup of coffee and somewhere secure to put all our wet gear, quite a lot of that. And, a special price.

Thoroughly recommend a visit to a live display of exhibits that you can touch and sit in.

The café, a separate set up, is next door, with plenty of parking.

Should be at least one more visit this summer, anyone with any ideas, please?
